Health, paid tribute to the service of Mr. Straus in maintaining the stations, asserting that the results in improved infant health had furnished an example to all the great cities of the world. He discussed the difficulty of getting fresh milk into the rity, stting that the 2,000,000 quarts delivered daily comes from 1,100 creameries and 40,000 farms situated in three States and in Canada. Some of the milk is shipped 500 miles.

"Under these circumstances, it is not possible to have milk from the cow daily," said Dr. Copeland. "The great thing that Mr. Straus eld for this city and for the world was that through energy and insistento he impresso the fact that milk must be pasteurized in order to make it safe."
